I Believe

...in a Religious Atmosphere

Hallahan believes in placing the proper emphasis on the all important phase of a Catholic school life. Religion becomes, not a subject relegated to textbooks, but a motivating force in every action. Important religious feasts are marked by special programs. Every student welcomes the opportunity to offer her daily work to God in the prayer before classes. Many cherished moments are spent in the chapel at study periods, and all students pause for a few aspirations before the basement shrine on their way to class. These acts result in a graduate who has a firm foundation for fulfillment of her purpose in life.

...in a Broad Curriculum

Hallahan supplies courses to meet the needs of fields open to its graduates. They are introduced to basic skills and required techniques necessary for the pursuit of specialization or higher education. Many students choose science, a must for most technological careers. Typing is a fundamental skill needed for business. All students study national problems which is essential for good citizenship.

A graduate should be ready to be gainfully employed, to further her education, and to be an intelligent and active Catholic woman.

. . . in Activities that Hold Challenge

In the diversified program of school activities every girl should be able to find a place. Are you interested in athletics, debating, journalism, student government, dramatics, music, art, or club groups? These and other pursuits await you. For time invested they pay in skill and knowledge gained and in increased ability to play and work efficiently and happily with girls of similar interests.

All Catholic elementary and high schools in the Archdiocese of Philadelphia are under the able supervision of Reverend Edward M. Reilly, J.C.D., Superintendent of Schools, and his assistants, Reverend John J. Graham, D.D., and Reverend John J. Haydt, J.C.D. In addition to their other manifold duties and obligations, they find time to take part in the school's social functions. In the picture at the upper left Father Reilly chats with officers of the alumnae association. Below, Father Graham and Father Haydt greet the prom chaperons while in the lower left-hand corner His Excellency, the Most Reverend Hugh L. Lamb, is shown at the graduation exercises attended by the superintendents and Right Reverend Monsignor Thomas F. McNally from the parish of the Immaculate Conception, Jenkintown.

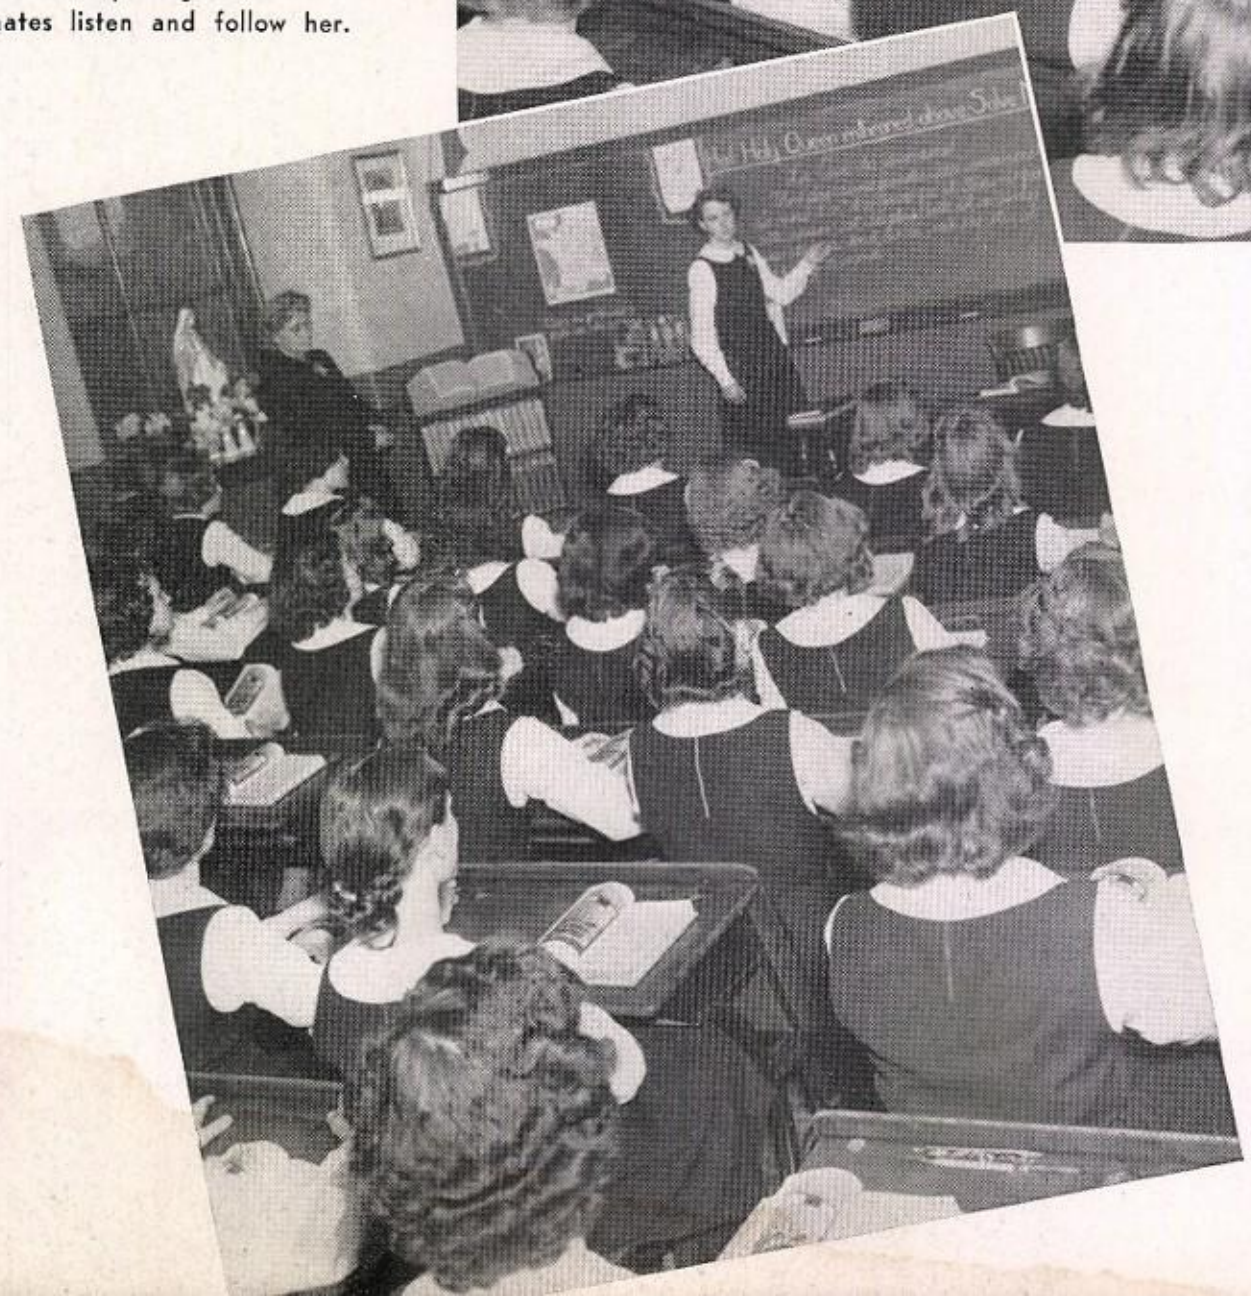
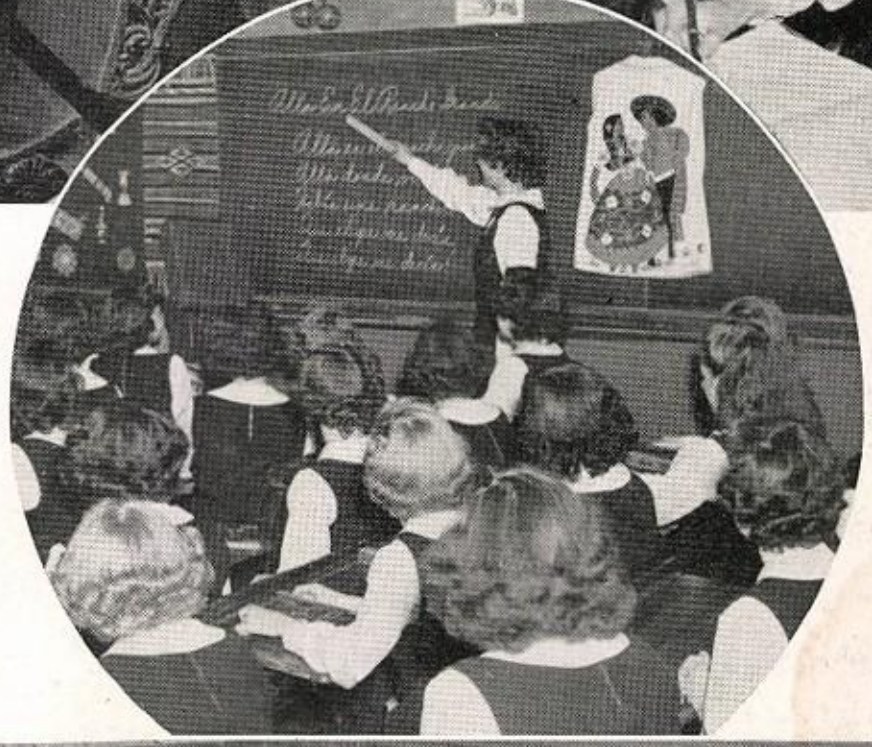
Loyalty, fidelity, love of Alma Mater and a fine spirit of cooperation are some of the traits of the freshmen at St. Peter's Annex, Fifth Street and Girard Ave. They show the true Hallahan spirit by expeditiously falling into step in all curricular activities and in all drives. We're proud of our little sisters.

Teen-agers discuss the topic of clothing in this English panel. The subject of what to wear and when to wear it provides valuable information. Modesty in dress at all times was stressed as a must.

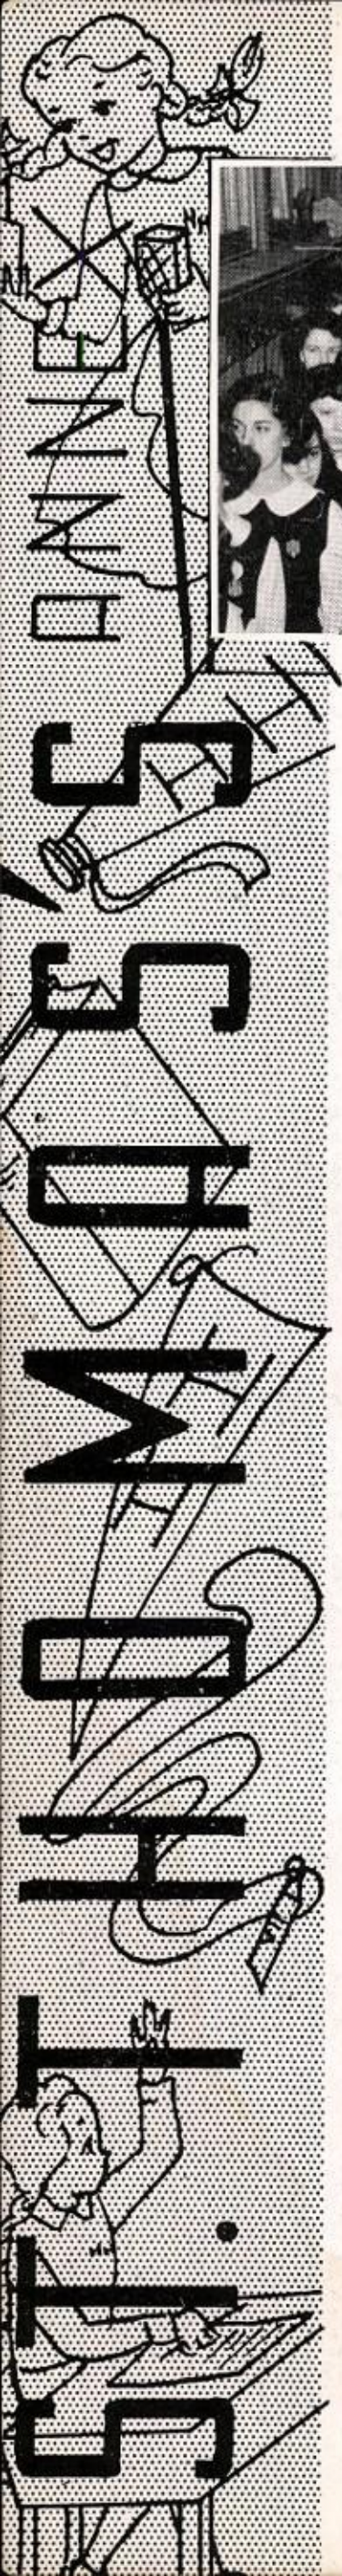
Freshman year introduces these language majors to the rudiments of a new tongue. At the blackboard Clara Duffy translates a French passage while her fellow classmates listen and follow her.



Algebra students find a solution to factoring problems from chart explained by Mary J. Brown and Marie Borrelli and proved by Mary Ann Sturm and Anna Toughill.

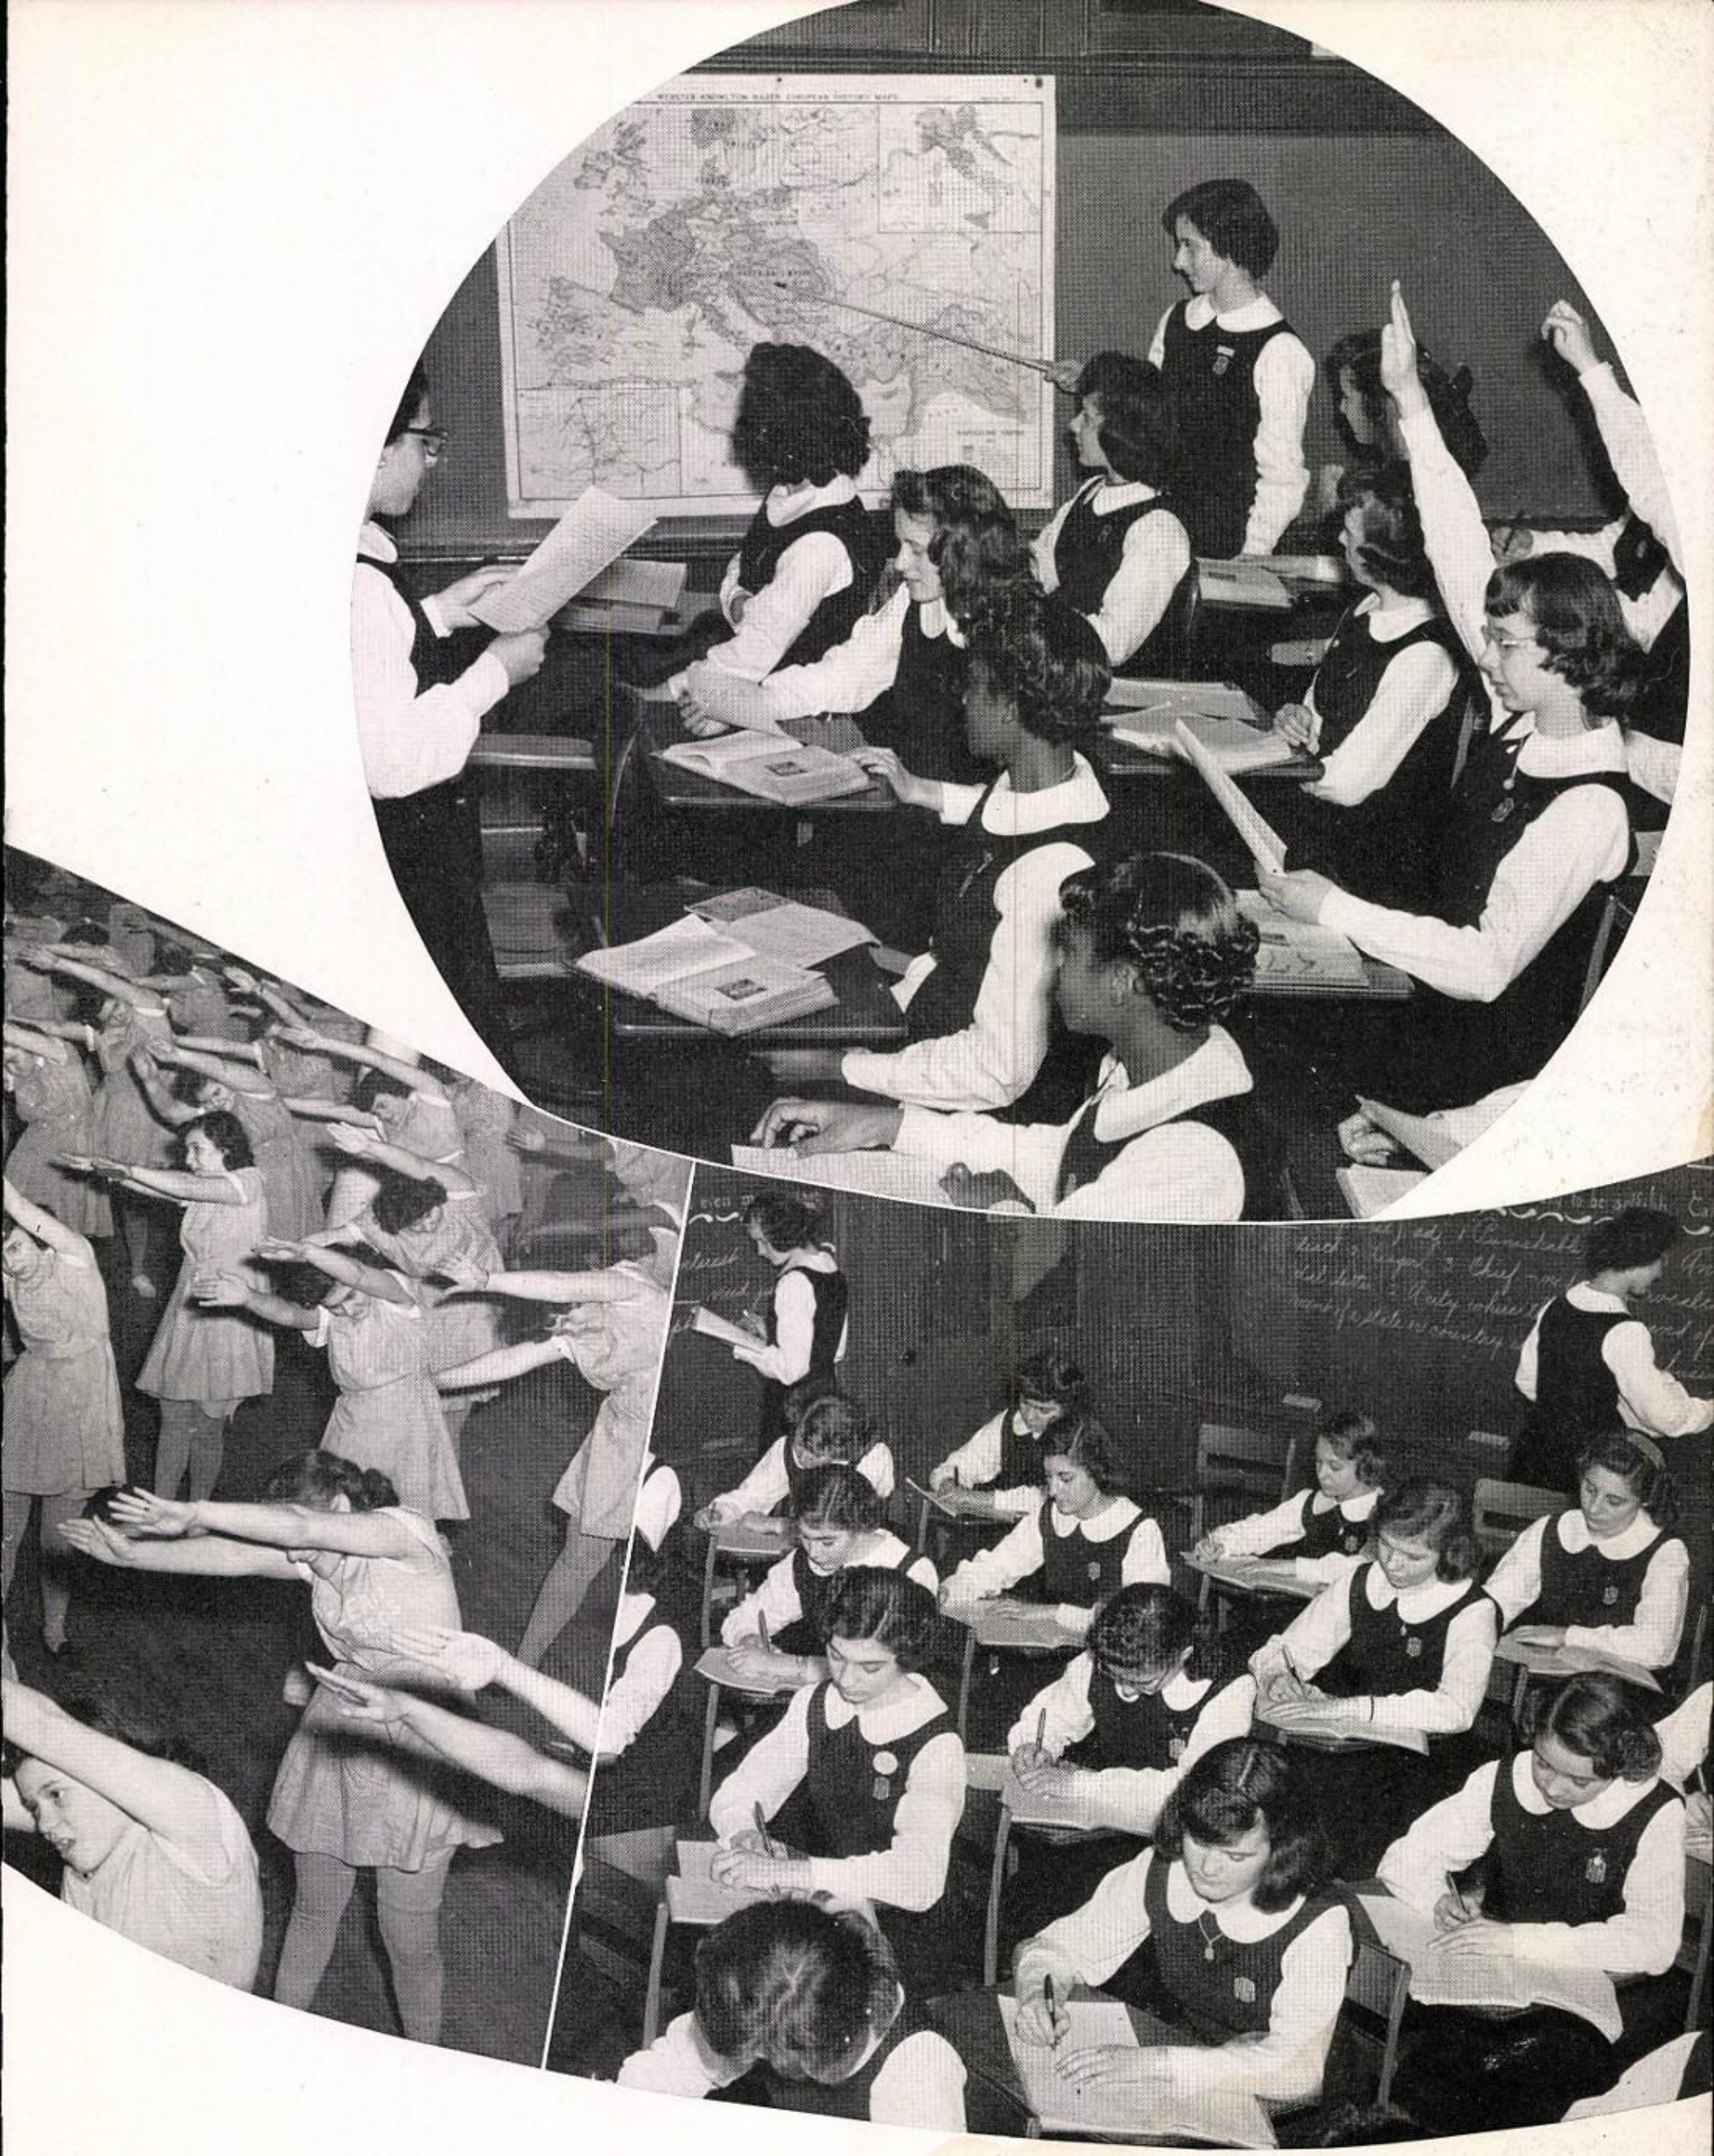


There is no time for siesta as the freshman Spanish class, led by Joan Skala, supplement their academic knowledge with a lively Spanish song. Below a group of promising young musicians earnestly practice for their annual spring concert.



St. Thomas Annex located at 17th and Morris Streets is distinguished for students who whole-heartedly enter into all Hallahan's varied activities. The freshmen in attendance here will be well prepared to step into the main building of their school when they change their green emblem to blue. Pictured here are earnest students who find high school life fascinating.

Interest in activities listed on the bulletin board is displayed by Edna Sandborn, Edith Dimino, and Margaret McDevitt. Gym periods are a necessary subject in a freshman's well balanced roster. Marie Boffa calls out place names while Rita Anne Pernice locates them on the map and Barbara Bowers volunteers information in this world history class. At the blackboard Angelina Caro puts to use the newly acquired knowledge of sentence structure so fundamental in the writing of compositions.



SOPHOMORES

History, an elective in sophomore year, establishes a firm foundation for the building of better citizens. Here we see a world history class with Jane Dwyer indicating Corsica, the birthplace of Emperor Napoleon. Others looking on are Filomena Greco, Elizabeth Devenny, and Grace Dougherty.

The Hallahan sophomores are busy building with assurance and success a completely new world for themselves. The exciting roster of a second year student includes biology and geometry, two required subjects, with history, languages, art and music as electives. These proud wearers of the white and blue promptly share in all activities and readily adjust to the regulations of Hallahan.

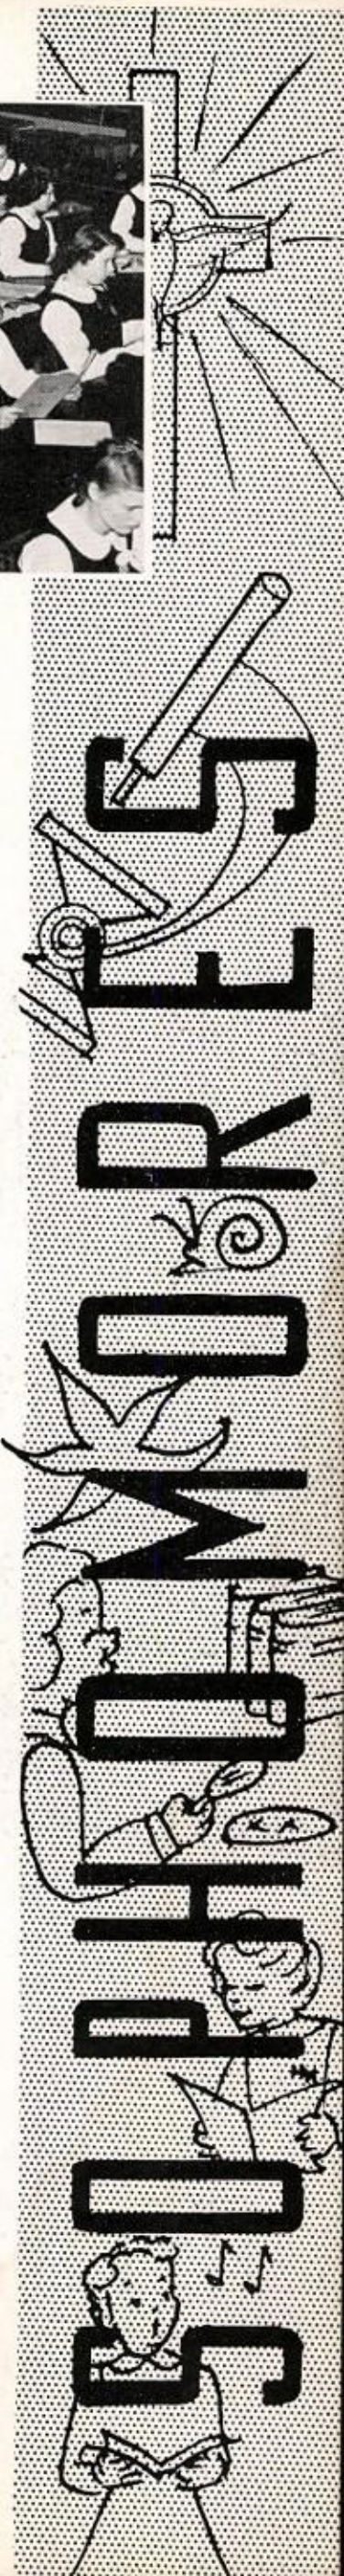
In addition to lively experiments, biology entails the study of the anatomy. Here interested biologists Mary Agnes McTeague, Bernadette McGehrin and Lorraine Ciafre are examining the structure of the heart, a very romantic subject.

Hallahan pupils always have the opportunity of reading fine literature. Mary Mood and Geraldine Marks read from the "Merchant of Venice" while Ann Cavanaugh awaits her cue.

Among the electives of those wearing the blue emblem comes modern European history. The topic is the European Church. Alicia Collins points to the map as Dorothy Dobies and May Summers look on eagerly.

The various heresies of the Church are one of the many important topics studied in second year religion classes. Active members of the group Mary Groome, Rita Krynski, Elizabeth Gray and Frances Murray await with eagerness to respond.

The weekly solfege class is a period scheduled on the roster of every sophomore musician. Here, Eleanor Frizell, Margaret Geckle, Mary Groome, Elizabeth Gray and Dolores Haley are seen sight-reading.



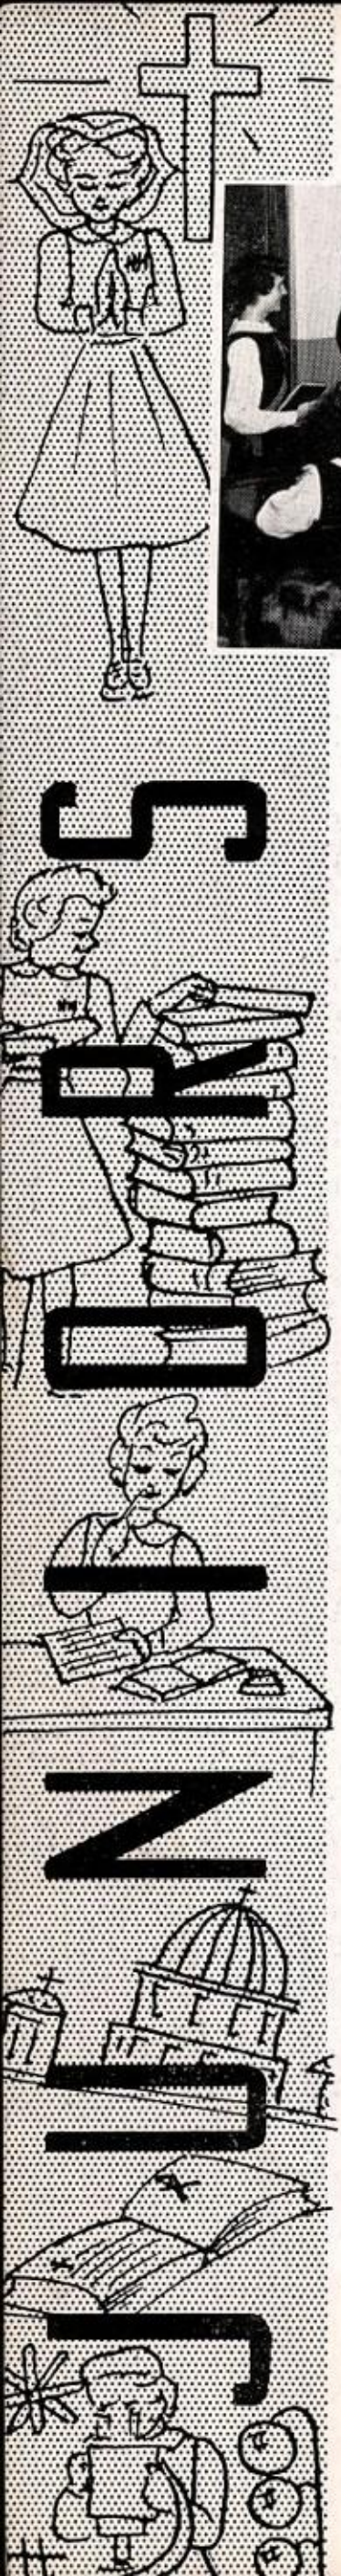
Wednesday morning means a health lecture in Hallahan. Here some sophomores are grouped about Dr. Angelo Perri, a noted physician as he explains more fully the disease Polio. Mary Cleary, Mary Boyle, and Antoinette Perri, daughter of the doctor, show their interest in his timely and instructive talk.

Sophomores who study music discover that the chromatic scale is a difficult but very important part of the course. Patricia Markey indicates the corresponding numbers, while Dolores Norgalis asks a question, and Patricia Querubin writes the notes on the scale. Meanwhile the girls learn to sing it.

THESE STUDENTS EXAMINE THE POSTERS, WHICH WERE ENTERED IN THE LATIN WEEK ART CONTEST.

STUDENT LIFE

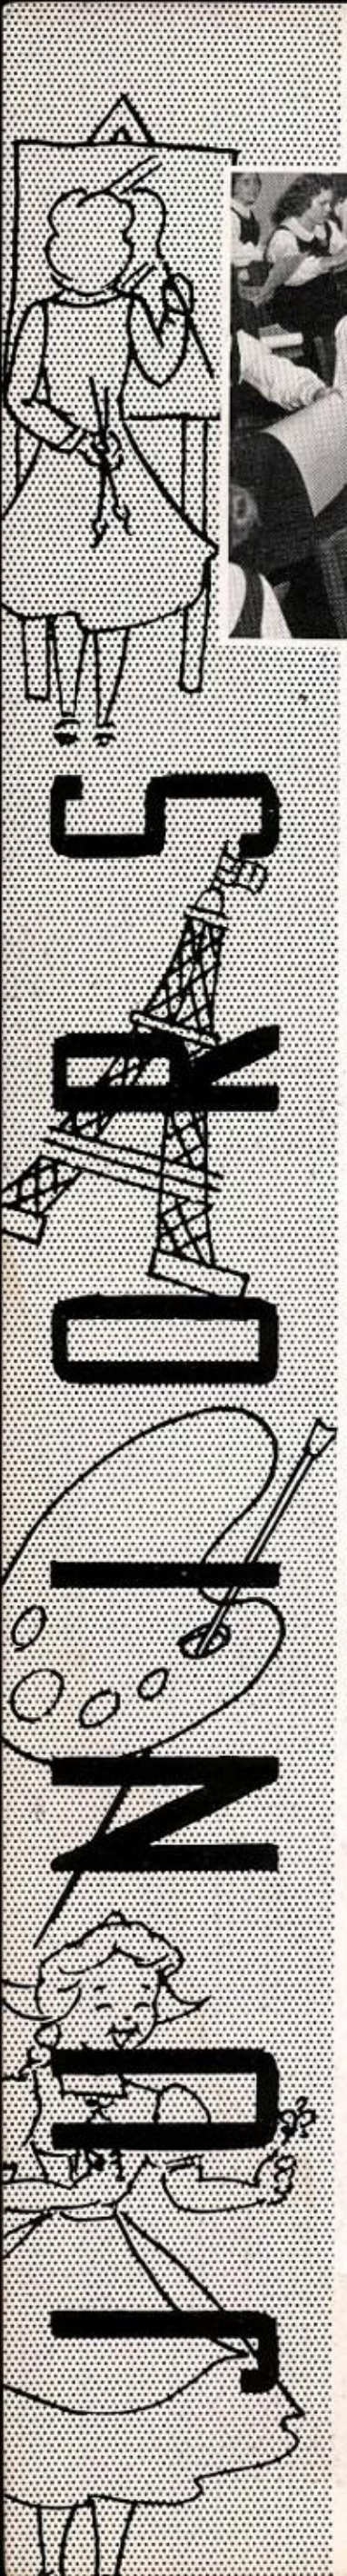
Theresa Kirsch, Barbara Kline and Mary McDonald join their classmates in this interesting experiment in understanding sophomore French. The girls are pictured as they tell each other's fortunes with cards, aided by special charts, which are written completely in French.



With the donning of the golden emblem, the student becomes a junior, and accepts the challenge offered. She will continue many of her old studies, but there is adventure in the new. Words like academic and commercial are new and demand decisions. We cast our vote of confidence for Hallahan juniors.

These juniors Regina Cush, Gloria D'Ulisse and their classmates in third year French get into the spirit of the language as they sing folk songs, dear to all French people, whether young or old.

The posters for the Hallahan Day show were well on the way to completion, when these art students were photographed. The art classes are responsible for all of the posters and charts, which decorate the halls of Hallahan throughout the year. Elizabeth Cimino, Joan Bergmaier, Mary Peters, and Margaret Butler head the line of artists putting the finishing touches on the old fashioned ladies. Following these are Kathleen White, Dolores Clements, and Patricia Hinphey, whose illustrations were accepted for the literary book. Our students make it a habit to win prizes in the art contests.



Isabelle Cavanaugh conducts the American History class in a panel discussion on the United Nations, assisted by Frances Ryan, Winifred Eldridge, Barbara Brandley, Dolores Clements, and Patricia V. McGurk.

Junior mathematicians Anna Mae Conley, Teresa Daley and Dorothy Fedor listen attentively as Josephine De Prima asks Margaret McGuire a question concerning arithmetic progressions. Catherine Carty works a problem at the board.

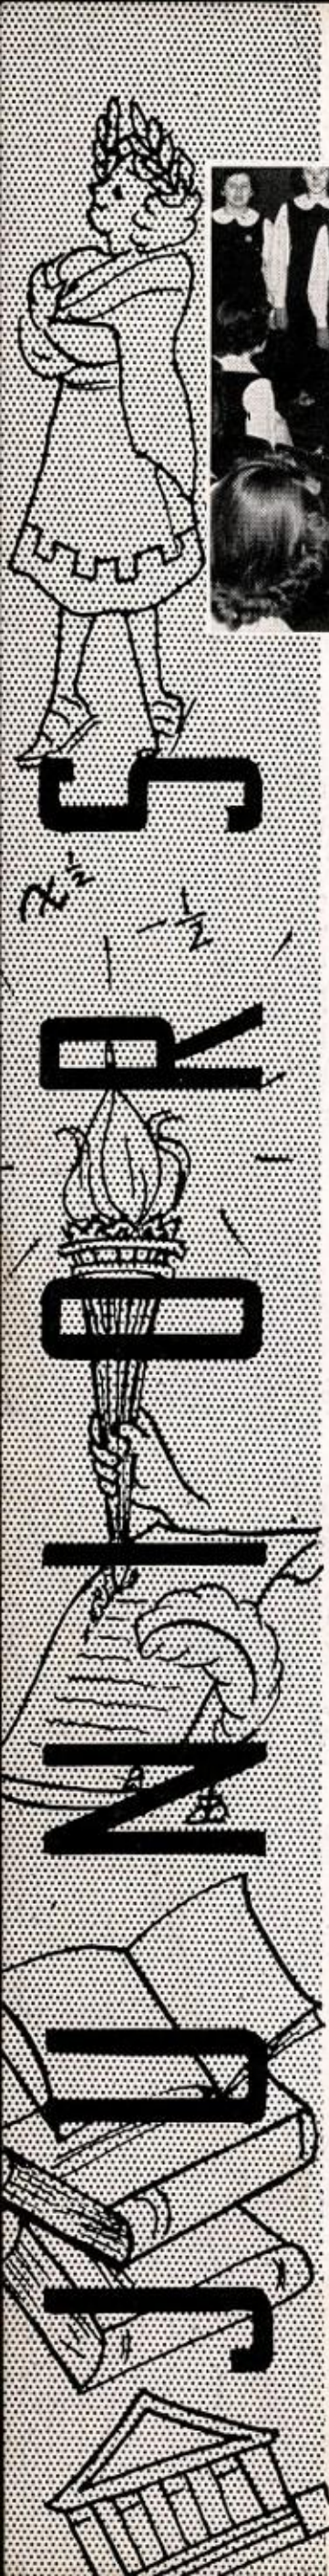
Visual education came to the Latin III class in the form of a slide projector. Catherine Brennan operates the projector, while interested juniors, Margaret Mullins, Helen Deal, Ellen Toner, Margaret Palmieri and Mary McCowan translate passages from "The Orations of Cicero," third year required reading.



A subject chosen by many students in their third year is chemistry, a necessary basis for numerous careers. Mary Jane Kane, Joan Palmer, Mary Regina Furia, and Dorothy Fili are shown making ammonia gas; seniors Patricia O'Neill and Florence Nacchio work in foreground.

Physics, which is offered to the juniors as an elective, proves to be one of their most fascinating subjects. Margaret Kleaver and Joanne Rossberg show great interest in an experiment on sound and pendulums.

The junior religion course emphasizes the laws of God and the church by which every Catholic must live. Dolores Beck, Rosemary Dougherty, Marie McCarthy, Anna McAnulty, Dolores Kurfuerst, with others explain Our Lady's titles, while Geraldine Galcik asks a question.

The senior year is one of great responsibility and of major opportunity because it is the last of four happy years. In it the eldest daughters of Alma Mater prepare to answer the important question "After graduation —what?" How they spend this year, what they put into, and what they get out of it are factors that modify the answer to this query. Shown here in classroom activities the seniors of 1950 prove that they can meet the challenge of the future.

Seniors dramatizing the WIP quiz class are Mary McVey, Jeanne Bevenour, Margaret Horan and Alice Casalnova. Marie Williams, Anne Sharkey, Lorraine Marr and Jean Loehr act as seconds.

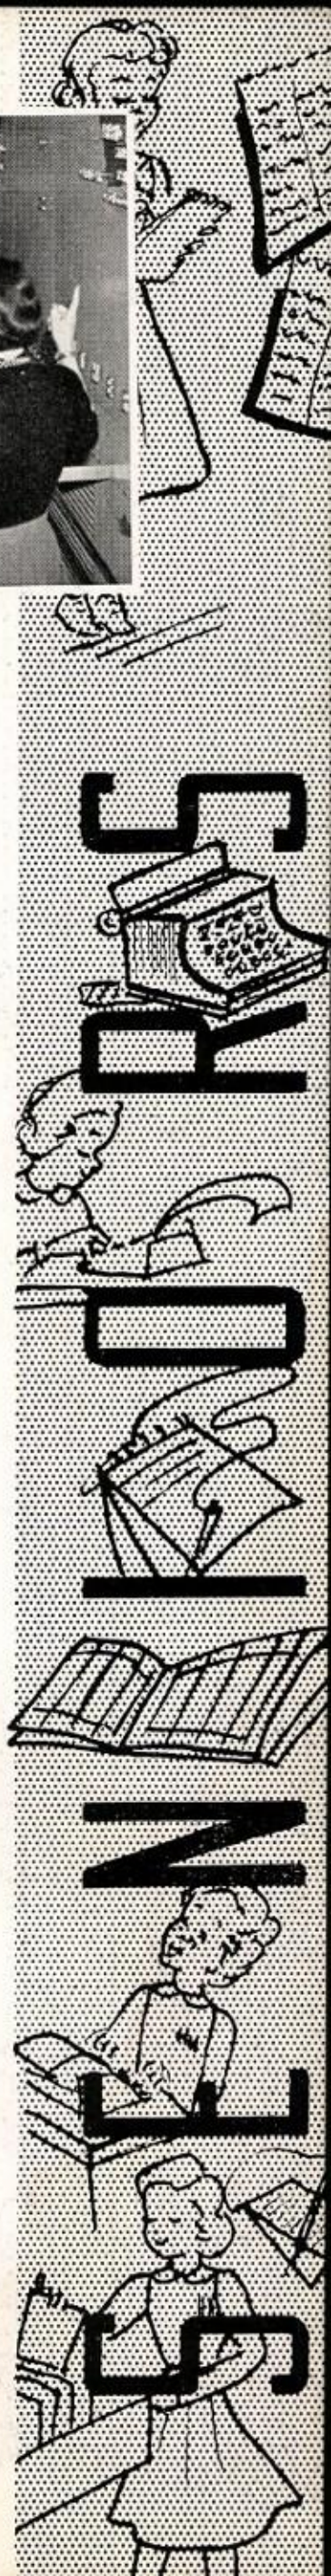
Margaret McCarthy and Joan Burke, with the other members of the senior bookkeeping class, proved to be intelligent spectators, as the cash register was explained during their visit to the Bulletin.

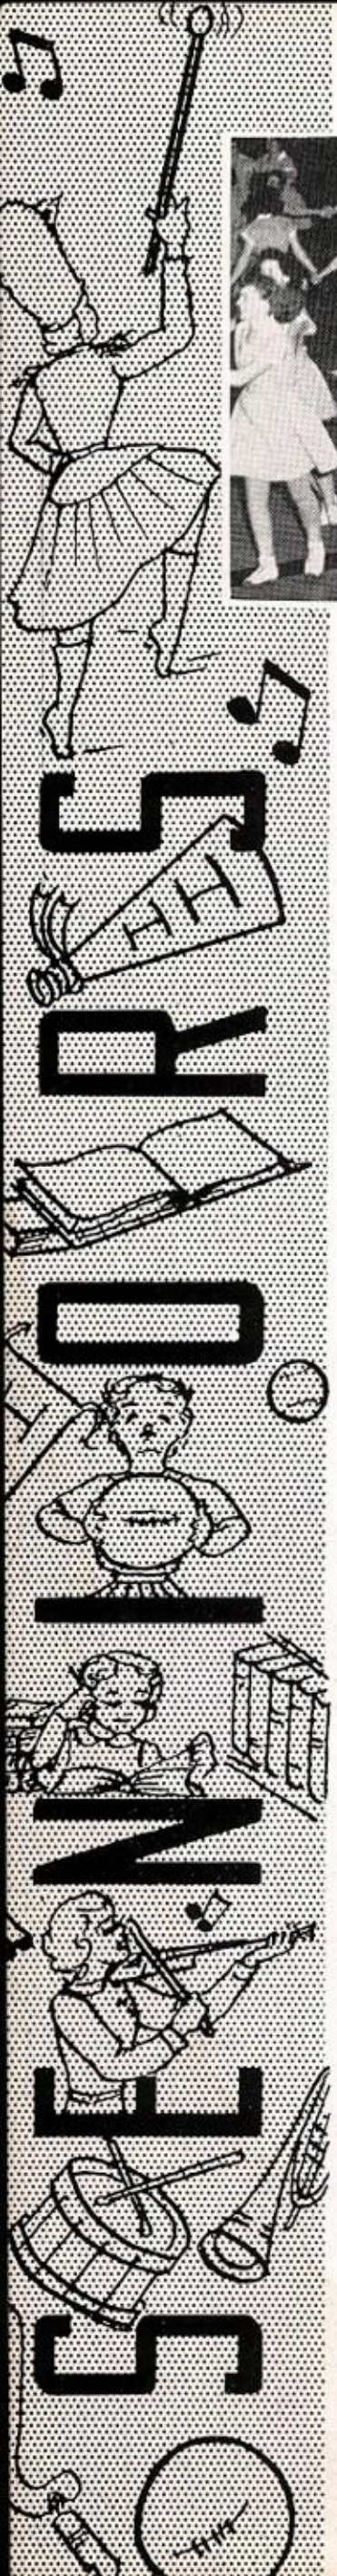
While Mary Ann Biancho and Barbara Shogi work on adding machines, Irene Hans and Marie Williams are deeply engrossed in dictaphones. These are only two of the many office machines, which are studied in transcription. The students shown are evidently enjoying their class.

There is more to learn in typing than the mere manipulation of the keys, as these eager students soon discover. Here they are cutting stencils, a task many will have to perform long after they have finished their typing course and are in the business world.

Dorothy Kalinowski, who is standing by the blackboard, conducts this very enthusiastic junior bookkeeping class. An elective, that can be studied first in the third year, bookkeeping is an asset to future business women.

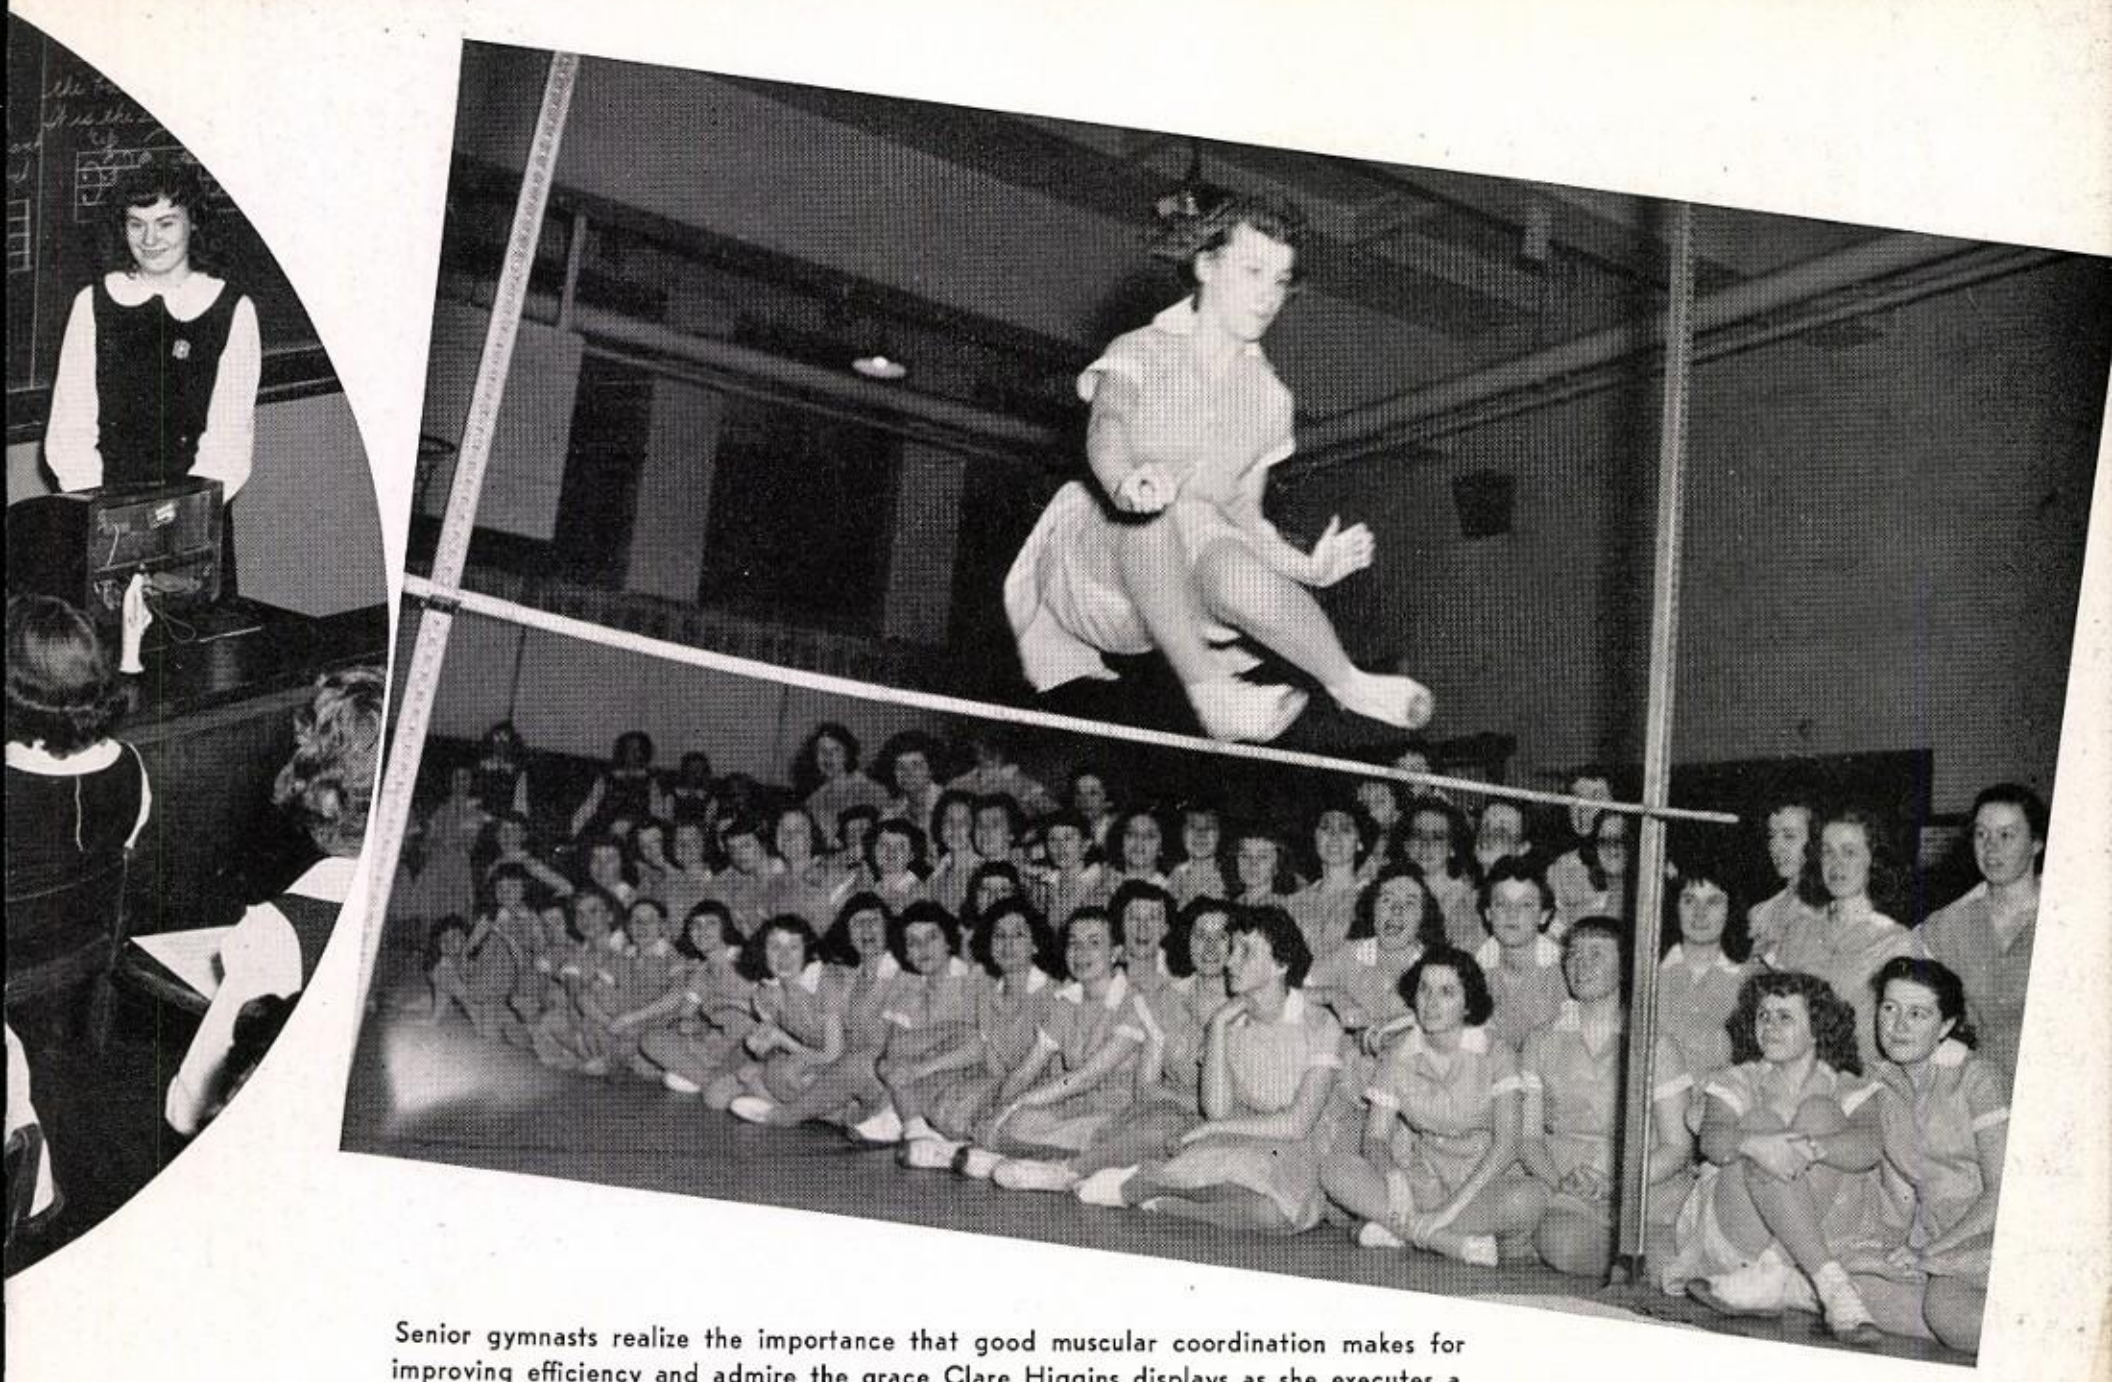
Touring the Bulletin Building, these senior transcription students watch with interest as Catherine Coyle, a former Hallahan President, explains the mailing machine. Lorraine Faia and Elizabeth Morano, in the foreground, are intrigued.





During a music appreciation hour, Patricia Walker demonstrates the clarinet solo in a theme from the Unfinished Symphony. Eleanor McGrody is shown operating the magnovox, while interested fellow musicians listen attentively.

Library aides Margaret Mary Boyer and Joan Summers classify and stack books as Ann Turner, Rose Kelly, Helen Bilinsky and Mary Tierney engage in their respective duties. The library affords culture and entertainment in its many books of wide scope and variety.



Senior gymnasts realize the importance that good muscular coordination makes for improving efficiency and admire the grace Clare Higgins displays as she executes a high jump.

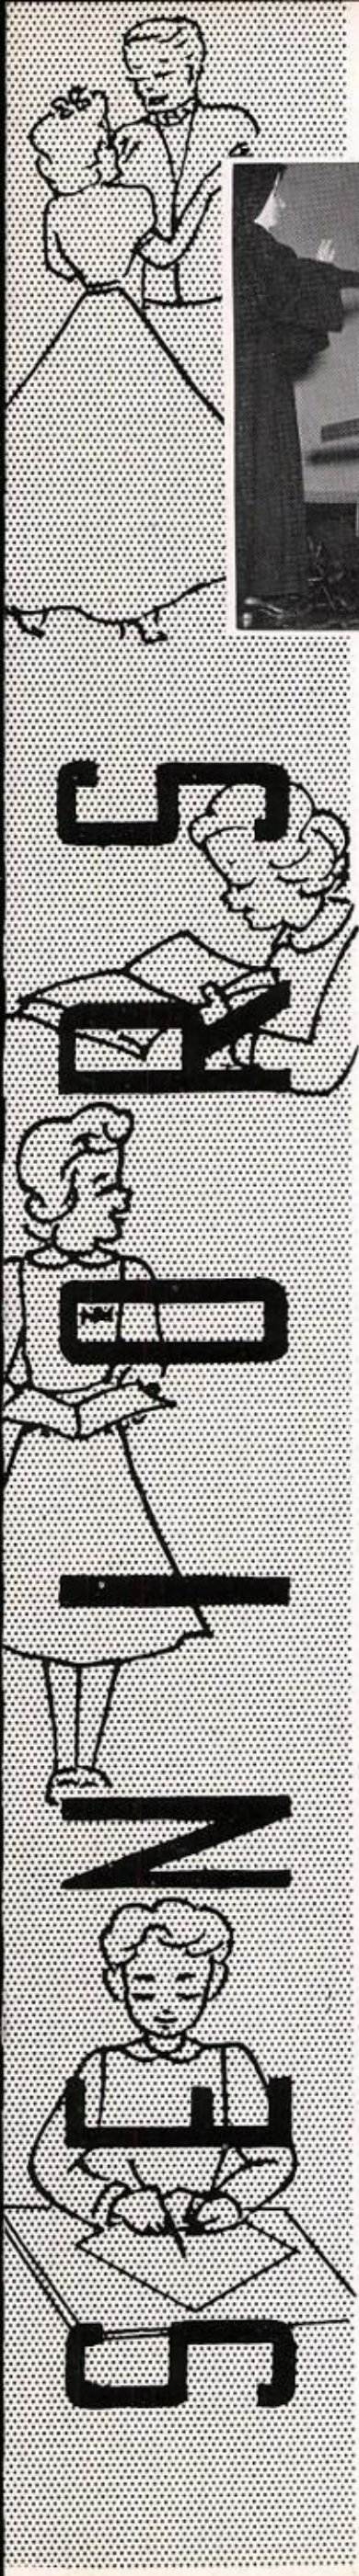
The Yuletide spirit penetrates the entire school including this second year German class. The girls enjoy the singing of carols as Anna Marshall leads them in "Silent Night."

French enthusiasts ably turn to journalism as they assemble the quarterly edition of their paper. Joan Feola, Barbara Flood, and Rene Nugent are prominent in this foreground.

Barbara Flood, editor of "Sand Script," with her associates, makes preparations for the circulation of the paper, through which the school is kept "in the know" concerning studies, clubs, sports, and all activities.

National problems teaches the senior to appreciate and to make proper use of her citizenship. Rosemary Christ is seen speaking on the United Nations Charter. Others in the panel prepare to deliver their speeches.



The seniors in this mathematics class are studying the principle of the sphere and the spherical triangle. As Winifred Bischoff points out the diagram on the board, Ann McIntyre follows the points on the actual figure. Betty Fox stands to answer the question which was asked.

Mary McLaughlin, Margaret Mackin, and Josephine Meglio are part of a senior class in religion, which always starts the daily lesson with a hymn. They feel this act will give them the proper spirit for the day's study of Apologetics.

Depicted here is Ida Fiume showing her skill in using a modern laundramat. The students of Hallahan are given many opportunities to become acquainted with the latest equipment that will make housework much more efficient, and which will add to the enjoyment of their domestic duties.

Senior home economics students practice making delicacies. Marion Smith and Mary Pinkerton are still mixing mince-meat turnovers while Margaret Schmidt puts her product in the oven.

Senior home economics students dramatize the story of a dress. In the initial stages of dressmaking are Catherine Enright and Helen Hanna who place their patterns on material, while Teresa Gallagher and Loretta Copson start to cut.

The completed garments need a few finishing touches, so as Eleanor Ward exhibits her ability to run an electric sewing machine, Alice Buckley makes a hem adjustment, and Lois Gunn and Mary Mulhair press their recent accomplishments.

Loyalty

Posed here both formally and informally are Margaret McArdle, President; Alberta Boyd, Chief Justice; and Theresa Sweeney, Vice-President.

Student Government is one of the most important and necessary functions of Hallahan life. The officers are elected annually by the student body and have the privilege of wearing a blue ribbon in honor of Mary Immaculate, our patroness. Each member of the Student Council is aware that this ribbon of distinction stands also for the added responsibility of constant loyalty, obedience, and service to the rules and high standards on which our Alma Mater has been founded.

Silver Notes and Golden Tones Weave Their Magic

Hallahan's orchestra, under the direction of Dr. Jeno Donath has met just acclaim, wherever it has performed. The girls who participate in this activity study music as a major and follow a schedule involving practice and ensemble. The orchestra is featured in the annual all Hallahan musicale. This year their selections included; the "Mignon Overture", "Krisleriana", and Debussy's "Girl with the Flaxen Hair" with Claire McPartland, concertmeister, as soloist. Besides this school concert, orchestra members are also selected to take part in the Combined Festival, which is held every year at the historic Academy of Music. Music as a major subject gives its students special opportunities including the study of theory and the history of music, as well as instrumental instruction. Orchestra members develop audience consciousness through participation in the musicales, and a consequent poise and ability to cooperate with others, which should prove an asset in any field of future endeavor, whether in music, or in the business or professional world.

Rhythm for Memory

Who has not been thrilled to the stirring music of the Hallahan band? It has always been a favorite with the entire school. Under the direction of its experienced leader Mr. Benjamin A. d'Amelio, the band once again has had another successful year. At the Hallahan Musicale it presented such a delightful program as "Chimes of Victory March" by Joseph Bergeim, "London Suite" by Eric Coates, "Sea Medley" arr. by Philip Lang and "American Fantasie" by Herbert Seredy. Its versatility was further demonstrated at installation day ceremonies, Junior Town Meetings and numerous other school activities. It is through the coordination of the various members of the concert band as shown at practice that such great ensemble is achieved.

Under the direction of Dr. Jeno Donath, the students interpret every type of choral music.. Their pieces this year ranged from Tschaikowsky's "Fairy Flutes" to that hanunting spiritual, "Swing Low Sweet Chariot." The verse choir under the direction of Miss Margaret Mary Kearney included among its selections "Hymn Before Sunrise" by Samuel T. Coleridge and Phyllis Fergus' very humorous poem "The Usual Way."

HALLAHAN

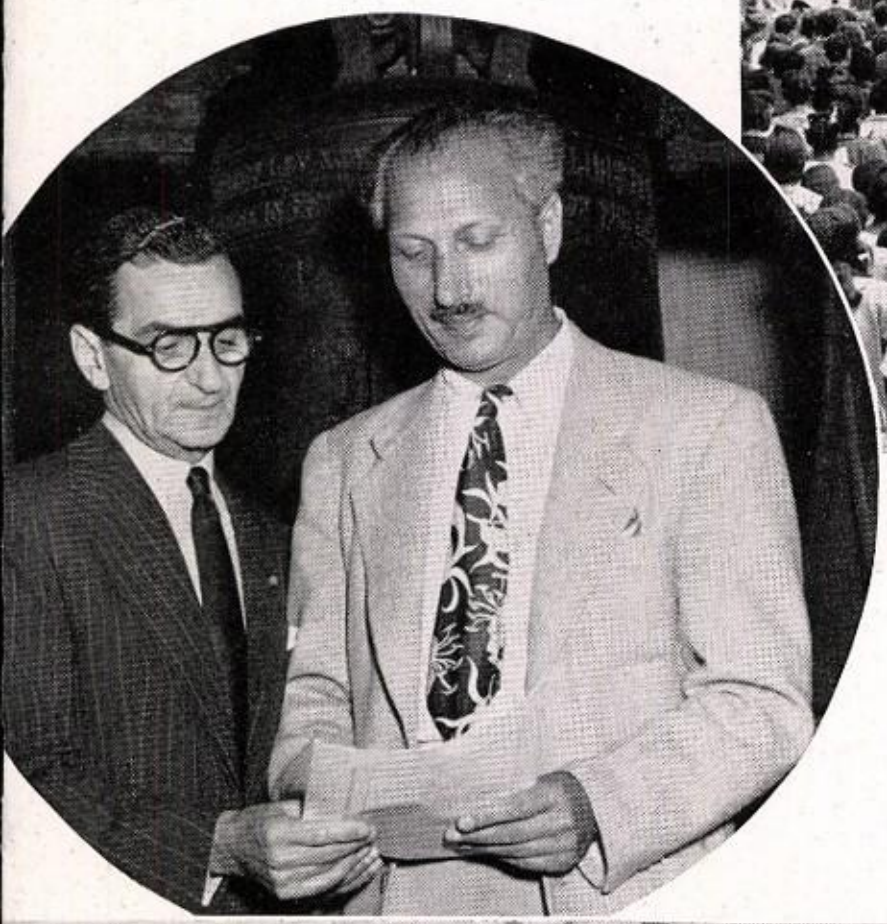
HALLAHAN USA

The nationalities that constitute our school were featured in Hallahan, U.S.A. Master of Ceremonies Eileen McCloskey led the Nationality ship launched by Joan Pisano, Florence Dalinsky, and Christine De Santis. Grace Slavin impersonated the typical Irish Colleen and Oksana Struk demonstrated a Hungarian folk dance. Margaret Burns and Dolores Calamaro proved everyone enjoys a love song. While Mary Lou Coane and Theresa Tuttle danced senior prom style, Therese Collins and Irene Siergiej featured the thrifty Scotch. The show put our school on the map for 1950.

Voices on the Air and Victory

Marcella Crowley took part in the "Town Meeting of the Air" in which the problem of displaced persons was discussed. New this year is a weekly WIP quiz program among the diocesan high schools, with Miss Maragaet Mary Kearney as moderator. Some of the participants were Maria Falco, Winifred Bischoff, Patricia Walker, Catherine Harmer and Mary Kleinschmidt, who appeared on science and music programs which take place on Tuesday mornings at 9:45 a.m. Also shown are scorekeepers, radio officials, and announcer, Johnny Wilcox.



This year Hallahan participated in a Flag Day program at Independence Hall. Under the direction of Doctor Jeno Donath, the glee club sang at the rally. At the left, Doctor Donath is seen talking to Irving Berlin after the rally.

A Lively Salute for a Live Issue

A special program was presented by members of the literary staffs of Silver Sands and Sand Script which highlighted Catholic Press Month. One of the various features was a typewriter tableau which interpreted the theme as senior Theresa Tuttle tapped out the letters. Portrayed as cheerleaders, girls in sweaters and skirts emphasized the urgency of "Reading, Riting, and Rooting" for Catholic books. These acts, together with the dancing of Mary Lou Coane and Diane Zebrowska, helped to convince, not only Irene Siergiej, but also the entire student body of the importance and means of encouraging Catholic reading in school and out of it. Hallahanites, support worthwhile literature!

Rev. Edward M. Reilly opened the eleventh annual Latin rally of which Hallahan was a co-hostess. Latin enthusiasts enjoyed viewing the art entries and a Grecian dance performed by Diane Zebrowska.

GENUINE INTEREST BY STUDENTS IN SCHOOL ACTIVITIES IS REALIZED TO BE NECESSARY FOR A SUCCESSFUL YEAR.

THE SENIOR STRING ENSEMBLE ENHANCES THE YULETIDE SPIRIT WITH APPROPRIATE MUSIC.

'Tis the Season to be Merry

One of the greatest rewards for our faith is the peace and happiness which fills our hearts at Christmastide. The annual re-enactment of the Nativity scene is one of the highlights of this glorious season.

Before adjourning for the Christmas vacation the whole student body reverently files down the corridor to receive a lasting impression of Bethlehem which remains among their most precious memories of school.

Spotlight on Unforgettable Moments

Hallahan was privileged to be the only school in this city to be blessed with the relic of St. Francis Xavier's right arm. This great relic had toured the United States and was venerated by crowds in three of our Philadelphia churches.

Every year the different sections of Hallahan vie with one another in artistically wrapping Christmas presents. These boxes are then sent to the Sacred Heart Hospital for the enjoyment of the patients. Each class wraps two resplendent packages, one for a patient and one for a member of the personnel. Happiness is clearly expressed on the girls' faces as one of the patients smilingly accepts a Christmas gift.

In a dignified though simple ceremony, the seniors received their rings. Above the representatives hold the rings which the priest blesses. Then they are given to the homeroom teacher who distributes them. Joyously each senior admires her ring. To her it symbolizes the glory and tradition of her school.

Pattern for Enchantment

The gala and colorful prom ranks high among the most thrilling events of the senior's life. The entire evening, from the moment she steps from the machine till she takes her partner's arm for the final dance, is one to be remembered always. Highlights of the occasion are the introduction to the receiving line and the fun of joining in the grand march.

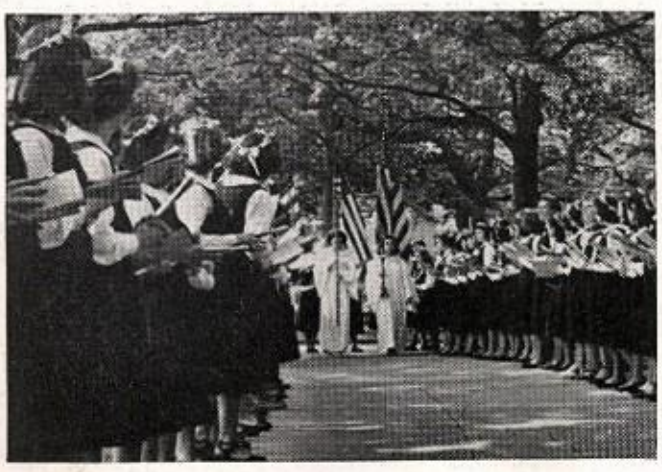
Holy Mary Mother of God Pray for us

Tradition and pageantry unite as the May queen with her court consisting of a member from each senior section elected by her fellow students enters the Cathedral. Every department is represented by a floral gift placed at the foot of Our Lady's statue. The guard of honor stands at attention in Logan Circle as the rest of the students and the president of the senior class mount the steps as the ceremony begins. Reverence is the prime keynote. The late Rev. Francis Patrick McVeigh of the Cathedral crowns the Blessed Mother as this awe-inspiring spectacle is drawn to an end.



Hymns praise Mary as all "bring flowers of the rarest." All hearts are filled with prayer as the procession honoring Mary closes.

Our Public Profession of our Faith in God

As our seniors walk down the ramp of the Municipal Court Building towards the Cathedral for their Baccalaureate Mass, they are publicly manifesting their faith. In their caps and gowns of gleaming white, touched with Mary's blue, they attend Holy Mass for the last time in a body. It has been a long-standing tradition that seniors' mothers who are Hallahan graduates walk with their daughters in this procession. Rev. Edward M. Reilly celebrates the Baccalaureate Mass, and is assisted in distributing Holy Communion by associate superintendents, Rev. John J. Haydt and Rev. John J. Graham.

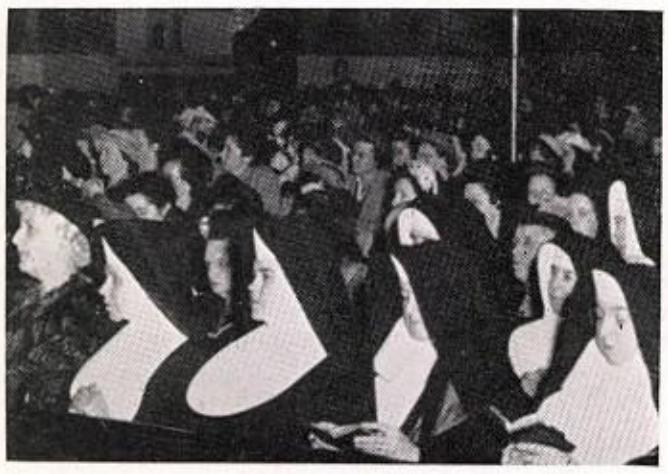
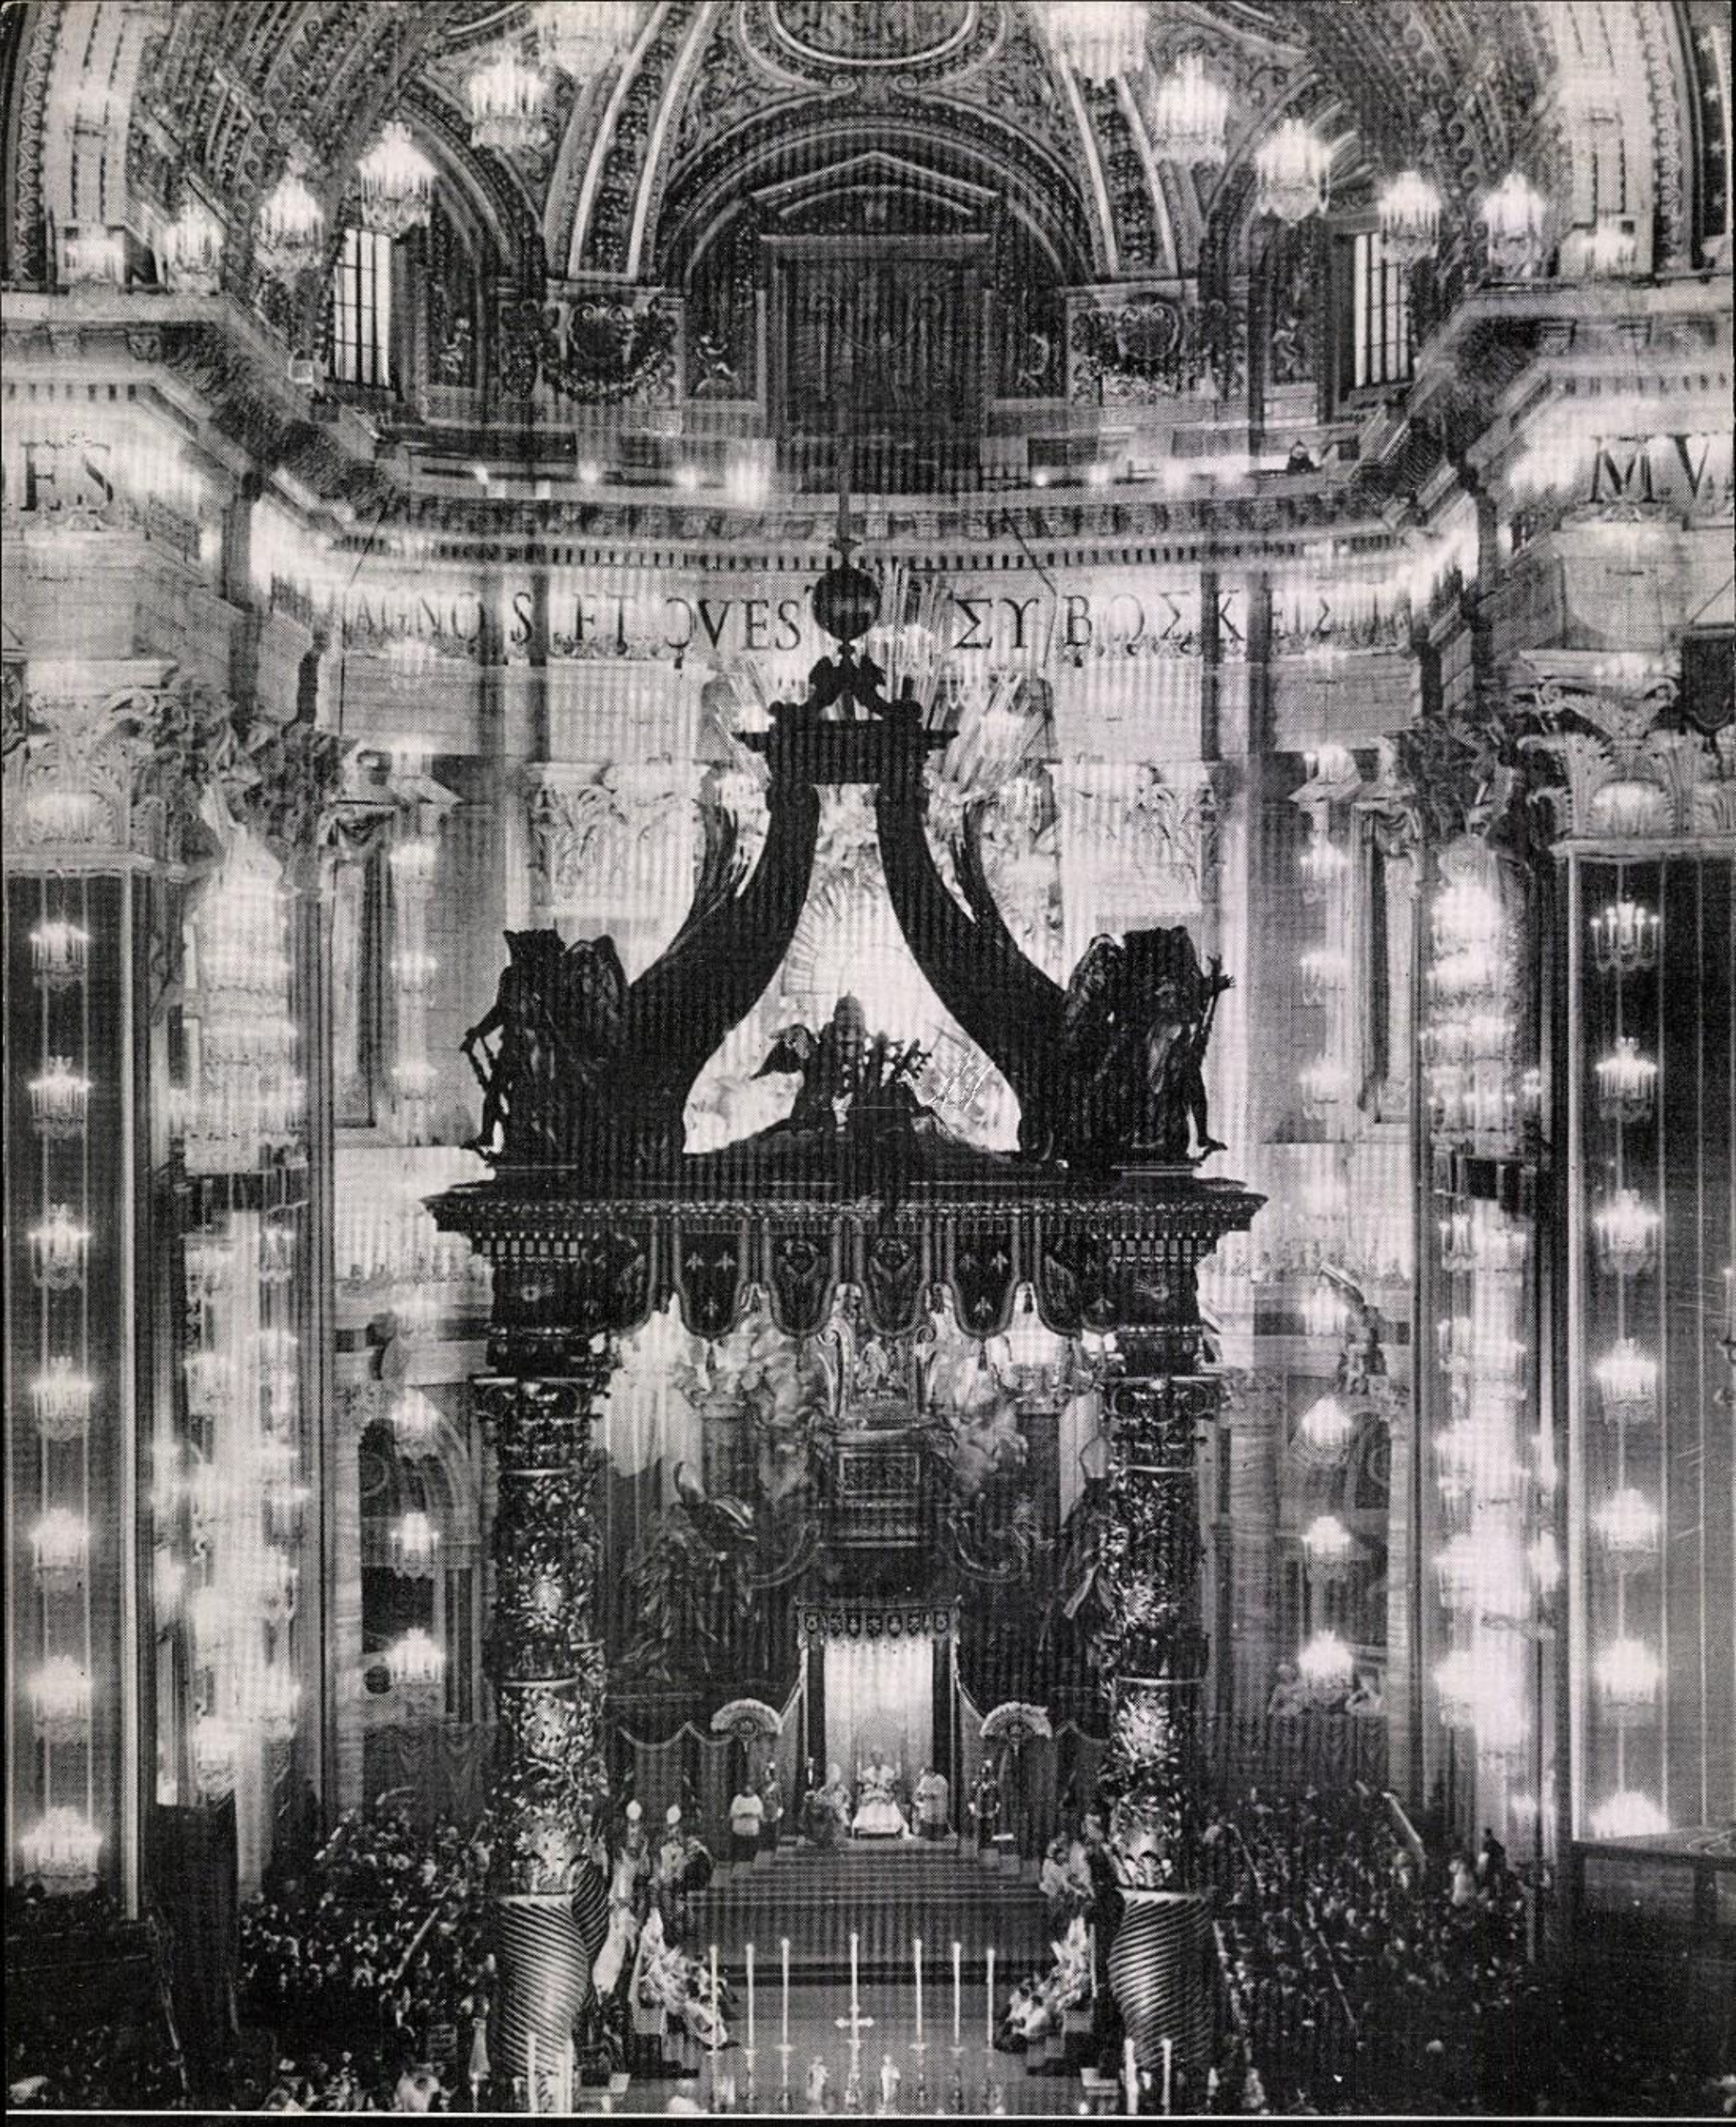
We Come Back to Show our Gratitude

The alumnae is a time-honored Hallahan institution. It is traditional that the highlight of its annual activities is the annual Mass at the Cathedral, followed by breakfast, held this year at the Broadwood. The guest speaker was Monsignor John J. McKenna. The custom has been established that the president of the most recently graduated class presents a check from her group as a token of appreciation to Alma Mater. Here Catherine Coyle, '49, is making the presentation. Reverend Edward M. Reilly, Msgr. McKenna, Miss Immaculata O'Donnell, Miss Marie Slavin, president of the alumnae, discuss the meeting.



The alumnae gives opportunity to its members to re-new old friendships with former teachers and class-mates. The above picture shows members enjoying the Communion breakfast. The purpose of the alumnae is to further the social, intellectual, and spiritual welfare of its members. Each year finds girls who wish to preserve happy school day memories, returning to Alma Mater.

Rev. E. M. Reilly, spiritual director, greets each assembly and tells the newest entrants about the importance of being a faithful member of the organization. Active participants in alumnae affairs keep in touch with school. Alice Cawley and Antoinette Martinetti provided musical entertainment.



I Believe in the Holy Catholic Church

In this Holy Year of 1950, raise your eyes

To seek for the hope of the world

That lies in the Eternal City,

The heart of Christendom, Pulse of the Mystical Body,

The new Jerusalem — Rome!
